ADDRESS TO CONVOCATION

The following address was presented by L.C. Leitch, Vice-President (Finance and Administration), at Part II of Spring Convocation.

Eminent Chancellor:

As you are aware, sir, the University of Alberta has one of the finest libraries in Canada, and indeed in North America. While browsing through the card catalogue one day, I happened upon a title Modern Atlantis. Intrigued, I withdrew the volume and found to my amazement that there is indeed a country called Atlantis. Not surprisingly, it is little known, except to anthropologists and some sociologists, since it never joined the United Nations and lives peaceably with its neighbors.

Delving further into the sparse literature on Atlantis, I discovered that it is a monarchy, had formerly been part of a larger, far better-known nation, and had separated amicably when the discovery of off-shore oil made it economically feasible to do so. The first, and thus far only, King of Atlantis, is named Alfred. His fairness and dedication to the well-being of his people have already earned him the designation Alfred the Enlightened.

Thanks to a relative abundance of natural resources, Atlantis, while not a wealthy kingdom, provides a respectable standard of living for its inhabitants. It is an English-speaking country, and on gaining its independence, took over an education system that provided instruction up to the equivalent of a matriculation standing. There were no other educational institutions, with the exception of two technical schools, where certain trades were taught.

For a variety of reasons, the people of Atlantis had never travelled beyond their own borders, and one of the first resolutions that King Alfred made on assuming the throne was to endeavor to broaden the knowledge and sophistication of his subjects. It is the furtherance of that objective, Eminent Chancellor, that brings me to the substance of my address today.

It is written that on the first day after his coronation, King Alfred summoned his closest friend and most trusted adviser, Sir Henry Heathcliff, and confided in him his dream. He proposed to establish a state University. Shamefaced, Sir Henry was forced to admit that he did not know what a University was, and he had to ask his better-read monarch to enlighten him. With a missionary zeal, King Alfred described an institution which would provide an opportunity for Atlantans to further their education and help them develop an ability for self-directed learning, an ability to synthesize knowledge, an ability to use reason in problem-solving and to instil in them a life-long commitment to learning. Scholars and scientists from all over the world would be invited to come and share their knowledge and do their research in an environment which would be stimulating and conducive to scholarly pursuits.

The good King went on to say that in his opinion, such a venture would be successful only if it were set up in such a way that it became all things to all men. The University would be an expression of the needs and desires of each and every segment of the kingdom, and therefore, each would have to agree on the appropriate policies and objectives.

His instructions to Sir Henry were simple. He was to go out into the world and visit as many countries with advanced education systems as he could in a six-month period. He was to talk to representatives of government, of University staffs, students and administrations, to the man on the street and to members of the media. When Sir Henry looked somewhat surprised at the inclusion of the latter group, King Alfred stressed the importance of the media in shaping public opinion. At the end of six months, Sir Henry was to return and describe the kind of University that would find favor with each of these constituencies.

The chronicler of this tale describes how Sir Henry left on his mission eagerly and with high anticipation. King Alfred awaited impatiently his return and when Sir Henry did come back at the appointed time, he was immediately lead into the royal presence. But what a change! His eyes, which had been shining and purposeful when he left were dull and glazed. Where he had been assertive, he was now hesitant and unsure of himself. Although it was clear that Sir Henry should have been given an opportunity to recover from whatever kind of an ordeal that he had been through, the

REUBEN BENJAMIN SANDIN LECTURE SERIES 26, 27, AND 28 JUNE

This year the Department of Chemistry's Reuben Sandin Lecture Series will be delivered by Har Gobind Khorana. Dr. Khorana, the Alfred P. Sloan Professor of Biology and Chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will lecture on part of the work for which he shared the Nobel Prize for Medicine in 1968. His work on the genetic code is of great and widely recognized importance, and so the Sandin Lectures should be of general interest to the University community. Further information about Dr. Khorana's lectures, their location, and times will be published in the 22 June edition of Folio.

King could not wait. With some trepidation, he asked Sir Henry if he was ready to report on the institution which would reconcile all of the requirements of all those that he had talked to in his travels.

It is written that the poor man first laughed hysterically, then sobbed uncontrollably. Although he was somewhat incoherent, he had apparently succumbed at the suggestion that there could ever be a consensus within a group that included academics. Sir Henry did compose himself, however, and proceeded to tell his story.

In order to structure his interviews as much as possible, he had decided to restrict the subject matter to five topics, and these were—teaching and research, curriculum, financing, foreign students and tenure.

With the posing of the very first question, he knew that he was in trouble. The typical academic staff member had a reasonably clear perception of the relative importance of teaching and research—and they were about equal. Unfortunately, however, promotion decisions were made by his or her peers, and the number (and to a lesser degree the quality) of publications was given greater emphasis than classroom performance. Sir Henry gained the distinct impression that for some academics, time spent teaching—the preparation, the lectures, the grading—was time stolen from their research endeavors. Their inventiveness knew no bounds, however.

As early as possible in their development, Universities, at the instigation of the members of the academic staff, were wont to establish graduate programs. The reasons given for so doing had to do with pushing back the frontiers of knowledge and attracting established scholars. The real reason, concluded Sir Henry, was to assemble a pool of relatively lowly paid, hard-working individuals who would teach the large freshman and sophomore classes, and do a great deal of the research that carried his or her mentor's name. These people were known as t.a.s. (for teaching assistants), r.a.s. (for research assistants), or simply as go-fers.

Governments and the public viewed the responsibilities of the professoriate differently. Surely their place was in the classroom. Research and publishing were simply excuses for low teaching loads and long summer vacations. On occasion a voice would be raised in support of research—provided that it had clear and defined purposes. There was a general distrust of pure research.

The student was somewhere in the middle. Although impressed by the fact that his professor had written the textbook, he would have preferred to see him occasionally. At the same time, however, a significant number of undergraduates who were exposed to the ministrations of senior staff members heartily wished them back in their laboratories.

King Alfred listened without comment as the tale unfolded.

Sir Henry assumed that he was in a much less controversial area when he raised the matter of curriculum. Not so! The politician, the man on the street, and to a considerable extent, the student, saw University as a place where one could become better qualified vocationally. It is there to train the student for more effective employment. Essentially, only those courses which directly furthered this objective should be offered. One government administrator had actually stated that the output of Universities should be tailored to manpower needs, and curriculum tailored to that output. The academic felt that the curriculum should be designed to provide a general awakening of the mind. Students must be guided toward a more mature exercise of judgment, which can be exposed to argument, criticism and testing.

The chronicler noted at this point that the King's eager anticipation had given way to deep gravity as he nodded for Sir Henry to continue.

The matter of financing higher education also found the various factions divided in their views. Governments and the public were generally of the opinion that the Universities were profligate in their spending, and needed to practice restraint. The academic felt that academic excellence was being compromised as a result of inadequate government support. The student was inclined to agree with his professors as the size of his classes grew larger and larger, quotas were introduced and evidence of decreased spending in the libraries and in the laboratories began to appear.

There was little unanimity even within the various constituencies themselves with respect to tuition fees. Some students thought that there should be no fees—that the state benefited from an educated populace and should pay all the bills. The man on the street still regarded those going to University as members of the privileged class who should pay a significant proportion of the costs of their education. The academic was somewhat ambivalent on this matter.

The two most emotional issues related to foreign students and tenure.

There was a strong protectionist attitude in the wealthier countries which would bar foreign students entirely. The idealists among the students favored no barriers at all, but virtually all Universities had restrictions. Governments generally were prepared to countenance some students being admitted from outside their jurisdictions—but in more and more instances were insisting on substantially higher tuition fees from this group. Once again, the academic was inclined to be ambivalent.

There was no ambivalence on the part of teaching staff when it came to the concept of tenure, however. It was the only means of ensuring that academic freedom would be preserved—a buffer against political and societal pressures. "Nonense!" trumpeted the man on the street, "tenure is nothing more than a device guaranteed to perpetuate mediocrity and/or incompetence. It's time those sleeping beauties came down out of their ivory towers into the real world"—to mix a metaphor.

At this point, Sir Henry was almost spent, but King Alfred pointed out that no mention had been made about the attitudes of two of the groups that were to be contacted; namely, University administrators and media representatives.

An expression of sorrow and compassion crossed Sir Henry's face. In a hushed voice, he described University administrators as all suffering from advanced, hysterical schizophrenia. He attributed their condition to the incessant losing battle to reconcile the conflicting demands of governments, Boards of Governors, academic staff and students. Every time an issue arose, each of these constituencies demanded that a representative committee be established. It appeared that on the average, administrators, from Departmental Chairmen to the President, either chaired or served on thirty-three and one-third committees, and attended meetings for sixty-six and two-thirds percent of their time.

Many of them ultimately became institutionalized—and none too soon in the eyes of the government, the Board of Governors, the academic staff and the students.

According to Sir Henry, journalists expressed consuming interest in the scientific and other advances being made at the Universities. They all agreed that stories of that kind merited feature treatment. It was Sir Henry's observation, however, that virtually the only times that Universities hit the top of the news in those countries that he had visited were when there were demonstrations of one kind or another, or the Engineers kidnapped a beauty queen.

Throughout Sir Henry's recital, King Alfred had listened with close attention, his face becoming more and more sombre. At the end, according to the chronicler, he remained silent for several minutes, deep in thought.

Finally, he spoke.

"I was wrong," he said, "to envisage an institution that could be all things to all men. A University will become great only if it surmounts adversity, and meets each new challenge with wisdom and a willingness to adapt, and to change."

King Alfred decreed that the University of Atlantis would be erected on Crown lands at a particular bend on the North Salishan River, and that it would have as its motto "Nolle Philistini Carborundum Esse"; literally translated, "Don't Let The Philistines Grind You Down."

And so it came to pass.

GENERAL FACULTIES COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the General Faculties Council was held on Monday, 29 May. The following matters were among those discussed:

Nominating Committee Report

Council elected new members to the following committees:

Executive Committee: A. Munn (Music), J. Robertson (Elementary Education), R.F. Anderson (English), I.G. Dalla Lana (Chemical Engineering), W.K. Dawson (Physics).

Academic Appeals Committee, as "alternate staff members": D. Cullen (Business Administration and Commerce), R.E. Braun (Classics); L. Laing (Community Medicine), as an "alternate student member."

Academic Development Committee: D. Holland (Engineering 2).

Campus Development Committee: D. Zirker (GS Political Science).

Housing and Food Services Committee: T. Williams (GS Rural Economics).

University Planning Committee: R. Wood (Chemical Engineering).

Master of Science in Physical Therapy

Council approved a proposal submitted by the University Planning Committee concerning the establishment of a program of study leading to a Master of Science degree in Physical Therapy. According to the proposal from UPC, "The purpose of the proposed Master of Science in Physical Therapy is: to prepare physical therapists for leadership roles in academic, clinical and laboratory settings by preparing them to undertake research to establish the effectiveness of various approaches to treatments used by physical therapists and by so doing, develop a stronger scientific framework for the discipline of physical therapy."

It was also noted in the UPC submission that the program, which will accommodate three to four students a year, will fill a long-felt need in western Canada where there have been few, if any, opportunities for advanced work in physical therapy by students who already hold a baccalaureate degree in the discipline.

English Language Proficiency

The Council considered a report submitted by the Committee on Admissions and Transfer concerning the current University regulation on English language proficiency (Section 14.3 of the Calendar). The Committee had been asked by the Vice-President (Academic) to review the regulation and to provide an opinion concerning the effectiveness of the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) as a measure of English language proficiency. Also, the Committee gave some consideration to the possibility that TOEFL might discriminate unfairly against prospective applicants on the basis of their national origin or race. In addition, the Vice-President (Academic) asked the Committee to provide a recommendation to Council concerning the current University practice; whether or not it should be confirmed, amended, or rejected.

In the Committee on Admissions and Transfer's report, the view was stated that the TOEFL test and testing program remains the best instrument available for the University's purpose. It was pointed out that, although the TOEFL should not be considered to be perfect, it possesses significant advantages over similar tests available from other extra-University sources and "over any test that the University itself might devise." According to the Committee's report, the TOEFL is supported by a well established organization that is working continually to maintain the test's validity. Furthermore, the TOEFL is the most widely used test of its kind and is available throughout the world.

The Committee on Admissions and Transfer also addressed itself to the possibility that the administration of the TOEFL test might lead to unfair discrimination against certain groups of applicants to the University. The following statement was included in the Committee's report: "Applicants whose first language is not English and who list sixty-four different countries of origin are accepted into the University of Alberta on the basis of their academic background and English language proficiency demonstrated by taking the TOEFL. Applicants from these same countries who satisfy minimum academic requirements are not offered places in the University of Alberta when their performance on the TOEFL does not meet the current English language proficiency requirement of the faculty to which they have sought admission. It is the opinion of the Committee that this practice constitutes discrimination on the basis of proficiency in the language of instruction at this University and not on the basis of country of origin; and that such practice is in the best academic interests of overseas applicants who wish to study in an English language university." [Committee's emphasis]

In response to a suggestion made by a representative of the Alberta Human Rights and Civil Liberties Association to the effect that the TOEFL requirement should be equally enforced on all applicants to this University, if English language proficiency is to be considered essential, the Committee stated its opinion ". . . that the TOEFL is a proper instrument to measure the English language proficiency of non-native speakers of English." It would not, however, be "the proper instrument to measure the English language proficiency of native speakers of English or of those who have taken their education in English Language institutions." [Committee's emphasis] The Committee also observed that, according to the administrator of the TOEFL Educational Testing Services, "if the test is to be a valid measure of English for non-natives, it should not be appropriate for natives."

The Committee on Admissions and Transfer, therefore, reported to Council its belief that "the current policy is not discriminatory." Nevertheless, the Committee suggested that the "University's policy can and should be modified in order to clarify its intent and to increase its effectiveness."

After considering the Committee's report, Council approved the recommendation that the current statement in the Calendar be deleted and replaced with the following:

14.3 English language proficiency for admission to undergraduate programs at the University of Alberta.

General Requirements

Since the language of instruction at the University of Alberta is English, except for those courses offered in French by Faculté St-Jean, all applicants to faculties other than Faculté St-Jean must possess an adequate knowledge of written and of spoken English. Regardless of country of origin or of citizenship status, applicants will be required to demonstrate proficiency in the English language as a pre-requisite to admission. This demonstration may take any one of several forms:

1. successful completion of the equivalent of three years of full-time instruction in an English language secondary institution in Canada;
2. presentation of a successfully completed full-year or more of course work, including an introductory course in English, in an accredited post-secondary institution where English is the language of instruction and from which advance credit is normally allowed by the University of Alberta;

3. successful completion of the equivalent of three years of full-time instruction in a school/institution outside Canada where academic subjects are taught by "English Language" instructors, as accredited by the International Institute of Education (I.I.E.), or as recognized by the University of Alberta;

4. successful completion of the equivalent of three years of full-time instruction in a school in Canada in which the major language of instruction is other than English but where the level of English proficiency required for graduation is equivalent to that in English language schools, as recognized by a provincial Department of Education;

or

5. presentation of results of the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or its equivalent in other approved standard tests.

a. Applicants presenting a TOEFL score of 600 (or its equivalent in other approved standard tests) will be considered as having demonstrated English language proficiency.

b. Applicants presenting a TOEFL score of less than 600 but 550 or greater will be usually considered as having a minor deficiency. Subject to the requirements of the particular Faculties, such an applicant may be granted provisional admission into the University but will be required to complete, successfully, one or more remedial Faculty of Extension non-credit English language courses and may be required to register in less than a normal course load in his or her regular program until the English language deficiency has been corrected. The student will not be permitted to register in a further academic year until satisfactory command of the language of instruction has been demonstrated (as in (a) above).

c. An applicant presenting a TOEFL score of less than 550 will be considered as having a major deficiency in the language of instruction and will not be admitted into the University of Alberta until proficiency can be demonstrated.

Specific Faculty Requirements

Some faculties may require greater strength in English communicative skills than is required in other programs. These additional requirements are detailed in the Faculty Regulations Section of the Faculty Calendar. In applying to such faculties the applicant must satisfy the additional language requirements as well as meet the general requirements outlined above. Students seeking entry as non-matriculated adults should see the special English proficiency requirements detailed in the Faculty regulations sections of the Calendar.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The Board of Governors held its regular monthly meeting on Friday, 2 June. The following matters were among those considered.

Citizenship/Residence Guidelines in Quota Faculties

The Academic Concerns Committee reported that it has been advised by General Faculties Council that the citizenship/residence guidelines in quota faculties be continued for a further trial period from 1 September 1978 to 31 August 1981. It was noted that the initial trial period had not given adequate time to evaluate these guidelines properly.

Appointment to Royal Alexandra Hospital Board

The Board approved a recommendation from the Dean of Medicine that S. Kling, Assistant Dean in the Faculty of Medicine, be appointed to membership on the Board of the Royal Alexandra Hospital. He will be replacing D. R. Wilson who will be retiring on 31 August.

University Athletic Board Fee Increase

The Board members approved an increase in the University Athletic Board fee of $1 per year from $16 to $17 as a condition of registration for all full-time undergraduate students commencing with the 1978-79 Winter Session.

Policy on the Granting of Easements

Section 49 of the Universities Act exempts the University from expropriation except in special cases. The power to expropriate land conferred by any statute on a municipality or any other person does not extend to the land of a university, students' union, or graduate students' association unless the statute conferring the power is made in express terms to apply to the land of a university, the graduate students' association or the students' union, as the case may be.

Board members approved the following statement of policy presented by the Building Committee: "The University will normally discourage requests for the granting of easements across University property."

This decision was reached because it was felt that University lands are already subject to many easements, many of which were granted prior to the acquisition of the land, and some of these have caused serious difficulties in the proper conduct of research activities.

NOTICES

Notices must reach the Editor by 9 a.m. the Thursday prior to publication. Written notification is necessary

Commonwealth Games Doping Control

As an essential part of the XI Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, urine samples from many competing athletes will be tested for the presence of drugs. A wide range of drugs are banned, including CNS stimulants (e.g. amphetamine), narcotic analgesics (e.g. codeine, morphine) and anabolic steroids (e.g. Danabol). Analyses will be carried out in the Department of Laboratory Medicine in the University Hospital, in cooperation with the Faculty of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences. Personnel from both institutions are involved in developing suitable analyses in addition to two persons employed full time by the Commonwealth Games Foundation.

Over the ten-day Games period, over two hundred urine samples will have to be analysed by four different methods. Experienced personnel will be present to interpret analytical results, but several others are required to carry out organic extractions of urine samples and to inject those extracts on gas chromatographs.

In keeping with Commonwealth Games Foundation policy of using volunteer labor whenever possible, we are asking for the names of persons who are prepared to devote at least thirty-five hours (five seven-hour shifts) of their time over the period of 3 to 12 August, much of it during normal working hours (8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. or 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. shifts), with little hope of any benefit except the satisfaction of participating in an important part of the XI Commonwealth Games.

Would interested persons please contact Graham Jones as soon as possible, telephone 432-3081. Some volunteers are still required to assist in the collection of urine samples at the various sports venues. Would people interested in manning collection stations please contact John Carline, telephone 432-8491.

Faculty Members Needed to Host ACU Delegates

The Association of Commonwealth Universities will hold its twelfth Congress in Vancouver from 19 to 25 August. As part of a series of post-Congress tours, two groups of delegates will visit the University. The first group of forty visitors will be in Edmonton on 26 and 27 August, and the second group of ten visitors will be in the city on 2 and 3 September.

Faculty members are needed as hosts for one day to show two or three delegates around Edmonton and the University. Fifteen to twenty hosts are needed for 27 August, and four or five hosts are needed for 3 September. The organizers of the tours promise an interesting day for the hosts and a good dinner in the evening. Most of the visitors will be from Britain, and others are expected from Australia, Bangladesh, Botswana, Ghana, Hong Kong, and India. Interested faculty members are asked to contact Mrs. Budd, telephone 432-5580 or 432-5682 during office hours.

Singles Club

The Campus Singles Club is having a party for members and prospective members at NASA House, 11046 87 Avenue, on 14 June at 8 p.m. There will be wine and cheese, shuffleboard, darts, dancing, and lots of good fellowship. The cost is $5 and memberships will be available. Telephone

John Wilson at 432-6523 for further information.

Fertilizer Placement

A seminar on the topic "Fertilizer placement for small grains and other topics related to tillage and seeding" will be given on Friday, 9 June, at 1:30 p.m. The guest speaker is Reijo Heinonen, Professor of Soil Tillage, Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences. The seminar will take place in E-3444 Chemical-Mineral Engineering Building. A fourteen page summary of research on fertilizer placement studies in Sweden will be distributed at the seminar and refreshments will be served. For further information contact K.W.
